A KLONDIKITE SUFFERER

MATHEMATICS AND ESTIMATES DISAGREE.

Cold Water on a Cold Subject—Will Cost $10,000,000 to Send 10,000 People to the Gold Fields.

Editor Star: A jolly ship master is reported by your paper as figuring that 300,000 people will go to the Klondike next year. A little arithmetic will show the absurdity of such a conjecture. At the most moderate estimate, the transportation of each person, and cost of one year's supplies, cannot be less than $1000. An army of 300,000 would accordingly cost $300,000,000. Thirty thousand emigrants to the Klondike next year would cost to get them into the country not less than $30,000,000. It seems entirely improbable that such an amount could be raised by all parties likely to become interested. Possibly 10,000 men might be sent there and supplied at a cost of $10,000,000.

The subject is an interesting and a fruitful one. There seems to be some reliable evidence that diggings have been discovered of considerable extent which are unprecedentedly rich in gold. But the locating and developing of the diggings must require much time and labor. It is probable that only a moderate number of new miners could at once settle down to profitable employment. A sudden influx of several thousand workers will involve lack of employment and consequent distress.

When the diggings are fully developed, granting that the highest expectations are realized, it may be conceivable that the gold yield of the Yukon valley will reach $50,000,000 a year. That is a very high estimate. Now, how many miners will this satisfactorily employ. Certainly not more than 30,000. Perhaps as many more people would find employment in supplying their wants.

It must be remembered that no food can be raised from the ground in that arctic climate. All food must be imported. The sparse timber of the country also must soon be exhausted, in building huts. Fuel will have to be imported. Altogether the business of mining in the Yukon must be conducted not only with extreme hardship, but at great expense.

Some exercise of common sense, aided by a little judicious use of arithmetic, will be apt to dampen the ardor of sufferers from the malady of Klondikitis.

Large Trade Built Up by a French Colony at Obock.

The London Journal of the Society of Arts says: "Ethiopia is a mountainous and very fertile country, the latter characteristic being especially true of the plateaus of moderate altitude (3000 to 3000 feet). According to the Bulletin de la Societe de Geographie Commerciale, the products are barley, wheat, millet, maize, sorghum, flax, various oils, medicinal plants, potatoes, coffee, tobacco, sugar cane, etc. There are vast forests, the gynamore, the mimosa, the tamarind, a variety of wild olive (reaching thirty feet in height), the lemon, the orange and the coffee tree are among the principal species. The domestic animals are horses, donkeys, cattle, sheep and goats. Birds and bees abound. The latter contribute largely in certain districts to the wealth of the country, their honey being used in the preparation of hydromel, the favorite native drink, and the wax serving for candles. The mountains contain gold, copper, iron and rock salt. Potter's clay is common and in many places is very pure. The principal articles of export are coffee, gold, ivory, skins, gums, wax and medicinal plants. The French colony at Obock has opened a route for commerce to Harar and various provinces of the empire. A postal service has been established between Djibouti, Harar, Addis Ababa, etc., and there is telegraphic communication between the two latter places. In the interior the service is by horse; from Djibouti by boat. Addis Ababa, the capital, has a permanent population of some 50,000; the total number of inhabitants of the country is 15,000,000. Addis Ababa is an important center of trade. Harar is the residence of Ras Makonen; it has a population of 42,000. This is the point of transit of all the commerce from the southern provinces. The goods are brought to the city from the interior by mules and carried thence to the ports by camels. The annual value of the trade of Harar amounts to over £1,000,000 and is growing steadily."

Edwin Forrest, the renowned tragedian, was showing a "super" how to do a small part, and at last exclaimed, in despair: "Can't you do it as I do?" "No," said the super, "if I could, do you suppose I would be working for five dollars a week?"

This illustrates the trouble with the low prices of many articles of furniture. If they were well made do you think they would be offered at kindling wood prices?

It is our desire to offer you goods at prices that are consistent with the quality, and we take pride in scouring the Eastern markets for the
